Honey Love: ——

So far have received no mail yet to-day, but since it is only early afternoon I still have hopes. We will be coming this week, have received a letter regularly each day.

We are now getting very, very busy. Things are just as they seem to be. As I am anxious to get your letter out before 5, when the mail is collected here, I sometimes have to write a tiny little letter — so you will know why, when this happens.

Everything is going along nicely. Occasionally my foot bothers me a little but not very much. I find after ~~[illegible]~~ have been those a fresh for a few days, it bothers me slightly. Not much to speak of and am sure that as soon as I am able to give it a good rest, it will be alright. How about your headaches? Still bother you? When you do get them does that still do you any good? Take care of yourself, honey, won't you?

The weather here dear, is ideal. I know I have already told you of it several times, but it is so wonderful I just can't help mentioning it all the time. It is really like Spring.

I was rather hurried yesterday, when I wrote you. I sat down and got myself ready for a nice long letter. Wasn't it nice of Dr. Lazier to take the trouble of sending that report? He surely must be nice. He told me I was the only doctor to cure you — So — since I don't want a sick hubby — you had better send for me real, real soon. I do so want to be with you precious. Do you still think April?

How is the office getting along? Have you been up to see that lawyer the Bleam was to introduce you to? How are the cases coming along? And, how, honey about that divorce case? Did the negroes back out? If SHE did, for the sake of business, I hope her hubby soon comes home in an argumentive mood + gives her a black eye. What do you say?

Yes, dear, I sure do think you struck a wonderful bargain with the typewriter. Sadie, who, by the way, sends her best regards to you, says they are terribly high, first now. You sure are proud of the machine, aren't you, dear?

With my best regards to all of your folks in Memphis, I'll close, with the testest love to my precious precious hubby,

Everlastingly
Your terribly lonesome
Wifie

P.S. Hope I get my check Saturday, as I could then easily cash it with mom & send you the money. I do not want to tell them at home that I am doing this otherwise I should borrow it until I rec'd the check
